Microsoft Bookshelf

For anyone who wants to write more clearly, concisely, and forcefully.

The most useful writing tool to come along since the word processor. Microsoft Bookshelf contains ten major reference works including The American Heritage Dictionary, Bartlett's Familiar Quotations, The World Almanac, and the U.S. Zip Code Directory. Look up a word, locate an apt quotation, even check your word usage, word choice, punctuation, and style—and do it all without leaving your word processing document.

Microsoft Stat Pack

For researchers, librarians, marketers, or anyone else who needs to quickly find accurate facts and statistics.

The easiest way to locate important statistical information. This reference database provides easy access to a wide variety of government statistics including the U.S. statistical abstracts, area wage surveys, and land and agricultural statistics. Information from Microsoft Stat Pack can be copied directly into most word processing programs. What's more, each statistical table has a corresponding file that is compatible with Microsoft Excel or Lotus® 1-2-3® so the data can be worked with and even charted.
